Didn't you choose Psychology because you wanted to know what makes people tick? Because you wanted to help people? Because you wanted to be involved?

Contemporary psychoanalysis is changing people's minds!

Drugs, diet, exercise, coaching, practice regimens, faith, education, holistic remedies, yoga - all these have a place in helping people live more comfortably and productively.

But psychoanalysis in the 21st century goes much further. Psychoanalysis offers new possibilities, changes old attitudes, releases unknown potentials.

Psychoanalysis itself has changed. Analytic practice is more open. Analytic theory has expanded to include a variety of ways of understanding people and their relationships.

Alone, or used with other therapies, psychoanalysis is the most potent force for helping people overcome problems of living, work and relationships. Psychoanalysis has offered new insights on development, trauma, memory, conditioning, affect, cognitive structure, ethnicity and culture and how psychotherapy works.

Psychoanalysis today is a profession, a treatment, a tool, a way of thinking, an unequaled opportunity for personal fulfillment.
