

---

the DEAR project presents

Calling Out Racism as a White Ally: Psychology Advocacy in Action

STUDENTS ONLY!

Saturday, 2/17/2024
11:00am to 2:00pm EST

---

Mental health professionals are often ethically mandated to advocate for social justice. One way to fulfill this advocacy mandate is by calling out racism when witnessing it. This workshop will explain common barriers to calling out racism for White allies and how to overcome these barriers. Instructors will also explain how to assertively call out a racist incident and make a request for change in a way that increases the likelihood of a positive outcome. Unique considerations for student clinicians will be discussed.

This intermediate-level, 3-hour training is designed to help you:

- Understand the barriers to calling out racism on an individual level and how to overcome them.
- Have the tools to confront ambivalence and move from indecision to action.
- Understand how to effectively and assertively call out a racist incident and make a request for change in a way that increases the likelihood of a positive outcome.

Details

Audience: Students in mental health related fields

Instructors: Yara Mekawi, PhD

Natalie Watson-Singleton, PhD

Cost: $35 (students only discounted rate)

Location: Virtual via Zoom

REGISTER HERE!

<https://www.thedearproject.com/calling-out-racism>